

Lecture Etiquette

The teacher will try to present material in a logical fashion.

The teacher will allow time for questions and comments at the appropriate time.

The teacher will indicate what is FYI (just for your information) and what is important for notes and the test)

Any topic, definition, procedure . . . presented by the teacher is important enough for you to write down and could show up on the test, unless otherwise stated by the teacher.

All students will pay full attention to the teacher and take notes during lecture.

If you have a question, comment, or an answer you must raise your hand before you speak.

Question will only be acknowledged at an appropriate time.

- If you raise your hand during lecture, I may not acknowledge you until I have reached an appropriate pausing place.
- I will stop periodically to ask if anyone has questions. Try to hold your question until then. Often I will answer your question in the remaining part of the lecture.
- All questions and comments must relate to the current topic of conversation. I will be happy to address other questions or simply talk with you at the end of class.
- All students will pay full attention to the teacher and take notes during lecture.
